Editor and Reviewer comments:

Reviewer #1: Although I cannot find something new with the conclusion. The topic and such a discussion will help Indonesia to improve the traffic jam and traffic safety problems.

Reviewer #2: The paper is interesting but somewhat unorthodox. I will give it a chance though if the other reviwers agree with that.

The feeling you get reading the introduction is that this is textbook material. This overall textbook feeling has to be reduced in a potential R1 submission.
I would need to see the introduction split into two section: introduction and literature review. 1.1, 1.2 and 1.3 are more in-depth material and should be a different section.
Your introduction should be stating clearly your objective/aim. It should also end with a structure of the remainder paper paragraph; this is standard practice in most manuscripts.
Please provide descriptive information about your recruitment. Who were your participants and how you got them? Any incentives given?
Interview is a qualitative method. Replace it with survey.
Why 7-point Likert scale and not 5?
I need a lot more benchmarking against relevant literature in your discussion. Find studies suitable and compare your results with their results.

I need at some point near the end a reflective commentary about the study's limitations and weaknesses.
